CASE was formed to assist community organisations and individuals in making better use of information technology to accomplish their goals.

We do this through education and advocacy.

We also offer technical support and a venue for an Internet presence.

COMPUTING ASSISTANCE SUPPORT & EDUCATION

CASE is a non-profit 'community net'. Membership is open to all of the bodies that voluntarily contribute to the region's social capital such as:

- non-profit community-based organisations
- voluntary service organisations and clubs
- charities
- educational, cultural and community development initiatives
- churches and religious organisations
- public policy action groups
- consultants specializing in services to non-profit organisations
- individuals who would like to contribute to community development projects or enhance their IT skills.

BECOME A MEMBER TODAY AND SEE THE DIFFERENCE!

Members of CASE are entitled to the benefits and resources created from the projects being operated by the organisation.

CASE aims to act as a developer and broker of skills and resources. Our ultimate goal is the creation of technical services that operate in a cooperative manner and empower members.

This approach has been responsible for the successful development of the following services:

- Low cost web hosting
- Domain name registration
- Email accounts
- Mailing lists
- On-site technical support service
- Online technical support
- Work experience for IT students
- Network design and installation (including cabling)
- Server installation and system administration
- Political advocacy and representation for the community development sector regarding technical issues
- Design and/or support of specialised systems such as online databases or sector specific software
- Access to member consultants
